

University of Delaware

-----Hypocrites on Policies and Ethics!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!-----

University of Delaware teaches that education will open doors to success, allow you to earn a higher salary and provide a future for yourself and your families.

Unless you are a Construction Worker!

U of D requires its employees to be educated and qualified individuals in all positions with verifiable credentials and references.

In the past, University of Delaware required contractors to use skilled and trained mechanics who successfully completed an Apprenticeship Program or another craft training certified by the Department of Labor, Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training.

This is a great example of rewarding students who further their education.

Except now, however, the University has decided to take a dump on its ethical and moral policies and has taken a hypocritical stance. The University is now hiring contractors based solely on who can cut prices by paying the lowest wages possible to its employees who have not been certified by the Department of Labor as having completed an approved Apprenticeship Training Program.

And this is by a University that is in the business of education! Imagine if the University of Delaware hired staff, professors, and faculty by using the ideology of hiring employees strictly of who will bid the lowest salary for a position without regard to education, accomplishments, skills, ethics, and value of experience.

SHAME ON THE UNIVERSITY OF DELAWARE FOR UNDERMINING
THE VALUE OF EDUCATION FOR CONSTRUCTION WORKERS AND HELPING TO DESTROY THEIR WAGES AND BENEFITS.

This is not a request to any worker or supplier to refuse to perform their job or make deliveries. This is a message to the public by the Building & Construction Trades Council of Delaware.
